CONCILIATION

Accredited Conciliator of KFCRI - (AcC-KFCRI)

Conciliation offers disputing parties a structured opportunity to explore settlement options with the help of a neutral third party. It is a cost-effective and time-efficient alternative to litigation. The Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996, which incorporates the UNCITRAL Model Law, governs both domestic and international conciliation in India—limited to commercial disputes in the international context.

With growing demand for flexible and efficient dispute resolution, the need for trained conciliators is on the rise. This course is designed to equip students, legal professionals, and individuals from diverse backgrounds with the practical skills and knowledge required to become professional conciliators.

Course Objectives

This training programme aims to provide a strong foundation in the theory and practice of conciliation, with a focus on:

- Understanding the role, appointment, and responsibilities of a conciliator in both domestic and international contexts.
- Developing professional skills to handle conciliation proceedings in simple, complex, and large-scale disputes.

Accredited Conciliators are entitled to use the designatory letters: AcC-KFCRI
